Understanding cables

Every cable message consists of three parts:

- The top box shows each cables unique reference number, when and by whom it originally was sent, and what its initial classification was.
- The middle box contains the header information that is associated with the cable. It includes information about the receiver(s) as well as a general subject.
- The bottom box presents the body of the cable. The opening can contain a more specific subject, references to other cables (browse by origin to find them) or additional comment. This is followed by the main contents of the cable: a summary, a collection of specific topics and a comment section.

To understand the justification used for the classification of each cable, please use this WikiSource article as reference.

Discussing cables

If you find meaningful or important information in a cable, please link directly to its unique reference number. Linking to a specific paragraph in the body of a cable is also possible by copying the appropriate link (to be found at the paragraph symbol). Please mark messages for social networking services like Twitter with the hash tags #cablegate and a hash containing the reference ID e.g. #06SANJOSE63.

SUBJECT: NATIONAL SECURITY PLANNING WORKSHOP FOR COSTA RICA

REF: 05 SAN JOSE 2909

Classified By: Ambassador Mark Langdale for reasons 1.4 (b) and (d)

1. (C) Tom: I am writing to seek your support for an initiative to engage early on with the new Costa Rican leadership team before it enters office and while it is still forming its governing agenda. During my consultations in Washington before coming to post, I met with Dr. Richard Downie of the Center for Hemispheric Defense Studies. He described the Center's organization of National Security Planning Workshops (NSPW) in Panama, Peru and Paraguay and proposed to organize one for Costa Rica. These workshops gather senior members of the incoming administration and their appropriate counterparts from the USG over a period of some 2-3 days in an off-site format to formulate a draft national security strategy. This strikes me as an ideal vehicle for us to advance our interests in Costa Rica with the new administration.

2. (C) The polls in Costa Rica indicate that Oscar Arias, who was president in 1986-1990, is certain to win the election. He will take office on May 8. When I made my introductory call on Arias on December 7 (reftel), I described for him in general terms the NSPW concept. Arias responded that such a workshop could be "a good idea." Polcouns Fred Kaplan later discussed the concept in a bit more detail with Kevin Casas, who is Arias's running mate as second vice president. Casas suggested a follow-up discussion of the idea immediately following the elections.

13. (C) I am under no illusions that dealing with a President Arias will always be a smooth matter, but we have to recognize that he is potentially an important leader in Latin America and the world beyond the borders of Costa Rica due to his Nobel Prize and past world status. He envisions himself as a player on a larger stage. Since leaving office 15 years ago, for example, he has campaigned in favor of the abolition of national armies -- successfully in Panama and Haiti and unsuccessfully in sub-Saharan Africa. He has also tried to garner support for an Arms Trade Treaty proposal, which we oppose. But at root Arias is a democrat and a strong believer in free trade. He is also independent and proud of his independence. We believe that the NSPW provides us with the chance to influence the security policies of his government in the right direction up front and that it is well worth a small investment

14. (C) Though I left the session at CHDS with the strong impression that they had adequate budget to cover the full costs of such an endeavor (which I understood would be on the order of $40-50,000), subsequent follow-up by my staff with CHDS since our approaches to Arias and Casas indicates that funding such a Workshop is not so simple. I would appreciate your support calling Dr. Downie to encourage him to follow through on his initial offer of support for this initiative.
